Septic Update:

Last week, I found out that John Zinza, who was overseeing our project at Wa. DOH Wastewater Management, has now moved to the Dept. of Ecology. The person taking over his position, Andrew Jones, has been working for DOH Wastewater Management for a number of years. I'm sure has been briefed by John about our project.

Andrew Jones was not in the office this week, and will begin his official duties next Monday. Our Engineer has a meeting scheduled with him next Thursday about another system, but will find out how Mr. Jones would like them to proceed with ours. I assume that Mr. Jones will want ADC Engineering to continue preparing a pre-design report, as was required by his predecessor.

One Announcement:

The Women's restroom by the pool has been found unlocked several times over the past two weeks. When using the restrooms and showers, do not move the dead bolt knob or try to lock the door after you enter. There is no dead bolt, and turning this knob actually by-passes the lock, so anyone can enter without a code. This also leaves the door unlocked after you leave. I will ask Melinda to pass this info on to all the renters.
